

The Flowering of Christ 3

Sunday, February 13, 2022 5:20 am

1. Greetings my lovelies. It is with tears of joy that I converse with you on this fine day. Let's delve right in, shall we? Again, I've taken the liberties to find themes in your questions and address several at the same time.

2. Question #1

"We've been taught that you can't be a victim and yet we are surrounded by people who have unwanted and unwelcome things happen to them. What is meant by "You are never a victim" from 'A Course in Miracles?'"

3. My response is simply to remind everyone that it depends on how you define two things: "victim" and "you". If we are talking about souls, no, they are never victims. They are learning, growing, and being challenged by what life throws at them. If we are talking about characters, then yes, they do experience exploitation and frequently do not have the skills to process this, thus being on the receiving end of negativity can morph into an identity. Terrible things here happen to the weak and vulnerable and strong alike. When talking about the earth, we must remember to talk about it on two levels, the human and the divine. With this question, a little context can help greatly. This will be a great discussion topic.

4. Question #2

"Mother Mary, I struggle with depression and grieve daily from the loss of a loved one. I know about the teaching that there is no death and that death is an illusion. Can you help me with this?"

5. The body dies and the character leaves the earth canvas. People experience life in a new way when leaving this reality, but this information doesn't mean much at first. You deeply miss the departed's presence and their effect on your own life experience.

6. Death is a big theme here. It is as big of a theme as birth, but never as joyous. It is a very frightening reality that without any warning whatsoever, you could lose the presence of someone close to you. Keyword: presence. This is what is missed most of all, physical presence, and even spiritual presence for most. This absence creates a void that is filled with fear and trepidation about moving forward.

7. In the new world, death will be a joyous graduation ceremony but this is rarely the case in the human world now. Embrace how you're feeling now and let love from your own soul fill the empty void, instead of fear from the mind. Remember that this can be a long process. Allow it to be as long as it needs to be to turn an understandably fearful situation into a loving one. Unfortunately, so many in this reality never fully recover from the loss of death. We have mothers and fathers weeping from the loss of their children and children weeping from the loss of their parents from decades ago. It is a wound that never heals for so many here. Allow love and the healing that comes from love to embrace you when you are ready for it to do so.

You are human and you are divine. Please remember the context. Sometimes, spiritual books need more words here and there to make them more meaningful and less confusing.

8. Share how you have dealt with the depression that comes from loss. Where are you in the grieving process? I remember grief well when I was on the earth, and I experience it through my sisters and brothers from this side. It is a big topic that isn't at all clear-cut and easy. It has the very real possibility of derailing a character-level lifetime and even preventing soul growth. I don't want us to drench this topic in fake gobbledygook spiritual language. It just isn't helpful, friends.

9. Let's lighten things up a bit, shall we? This next question has embedded humor.

10. Question #3

"Mother Mary, why don't you speak through a church leader and reach wider audiences?"

11. The short answer is that I Am using the perfect vehicle at this moment in time. The longer answer is that I don't want the Pope to be taken to a facility for the mentally ill. Can you imagine if Pope Francis announced that he had long, detailed messages from me? The news media would go crazy.

12. Enjoy your week ahead and keep these questions and topics coming.

13. Love is everything!

Mother Mary

End Time: 6:24 am