

Living in the Material World 2

Wednesday, October 13, 2021 7:20 pm

1. It is I, Rami. You are under my care now. You are experienced travelers, well versed in spiritual language and application. Now what do you do and how do you do it? These are questions that don't have pat answers. The Christ is a multi-dexterous, multi-dimensional being. It lives all over the world. We are learning to move as One. While one aspect of Christ is dealing with conditions in one city, another may be dealing with different conditions elsewhere.
2. It is through messaging that all parts of Christ can be alerted to trends we see, things that are underway or emerging. This is how everyone can be on the same page. Christ isn't at all interested in fearful reactions but is interested in knowing what is or what is about to transpire.
3. During the 'End of days as we knew them', the Christ offices, as you have been and will continue to be referred to as, will be affected by events and trends.
4. Other channels, besides our beloved Rick, have been sounding the alarm about material shortages. Please pay attention, Christs. Be very cautious about your money supply. Be cautious about spending money on non-essentials right now and possibly for quite some time to come. Build up your savings because prices will jump drastically, and various products may not be available at all. Christ enjoys abundance and will continue to do so, but abundance may look and feel different than it did before.
5. This is the beginning of the transformation of the world and all beings on it. It will not be pretty, but Christ needs to know.
6. Expect regular messaging from my team and me to arrive in lovely bulk packages each Sunday. We will continue with Jesus' tradition.
7. In support,
Rami

Living in the Material World 3

1. It is I, Rami. Yesterday, I cautioned you each to begin to put the brakes on non-essential spending in your personal financial lives. Today, let's expand on this topic by introducing a word that is familiar to many. This word is frugality.
2. Treat everything that you currently have as something that may not be able to be replaced, either because a replacement item is not available or there are replacement items available, and they are simply too expensive to justify purchasing them. The term, 'make-due', is about to become paramount. The days of buying new shoes and clothes just because you want to are about to end.
3. Many of you enjoy purchasing fresh fruit and vegetables and have access to local farmer's markets. If these were to become scarcer or dry up for any reason, it will be important to have a back-up.
4. Starting immediately, if you can do so financially and space wise, please consider buying a few extra canned goods than you normally buy each time you shop. Be a squirrel and start to stash away things that will last and will be needed.
5. Start a cash reserve in the event of electrical outages and remember the adage to only give away 10% of your extra to anyone in need. If you have $100 extra, you can bless someone or a charity with 10% of that, which is $10.
6. Tomorrow, we will dive in deeper. Good night, everyone.
7. In Light,
Rami

1. It is I, Rami. This is not a doomsday scenario. I Am not encouraging you to hoard supplies and prevent others from having access to them. I Am simply asking Christ to accept the very real probability that living here is about to have different living conditions. Going from stores that are overflowing with affordable goods to stores with empty shelves and prices that will put what is on the shelves unaffordable to most will be a very difficult transition.
2. If Christ can be ahead of the curve, this will help greatly. This will be one more tool in your vast toolbox to model to others. What will you model? You will model acceptance and joy as the consumer age contracts and finally ends. While others lose their marbles, you will keep yours.
3. The Christ offices are not materialistic at all but you each have enjoyed certain lifestyles. Now, I Am asking you to make lemonade out of lemons and enjoy a new lifestyle with less.
4. No one will escape what's coming, not even the very wealthy. Everyone will have to prioritize and cut back. There will be no other choice. Think of the possibilities to express love in tough times. There can be potlucks, book exchanges, old fashioned salons where people gather to civilly converse. There can be yard sales where goods or services are exchanged instead of money.
5. In other words, everyone will be forced to re-evaluate and embrace relationship building instead of the mind-numbing consumerism of the past 70 years.

6. With wisdom.

Rami

1. It is I, Rami. There will be a silver lining for what is to come, just as there have been silver linings for many events ranging from natural or man-made disasters to pandemics. The question of 'How can this show me what's true?' is the one to always remind yourself of.
2. Consumerism and materialism have built a false reality to match the great false identity. They create more and more division and separation between the haves and the have nots. People even ask if God likes some over others based on their buying power.
3. This is what will change. We would like our Christ offices to give themselves some time to adjust and then take the bull by the horns and embrace the new way. No one is being punished. It will just be a new set of opportunities to promote growth in humanity.
4. If any of this is sounding familiar, that's because it will be. History repeats itself. Conditions will be like that of the Great Depression in the 1930's. Financial stability and scarcity of goods will re-visit the earth, and this will in turn cause great political unrest. Humankind will miss the point and see how wrong the situation is and then blame it on whoever is in charge politically.
5. Don't fall into the blame and shame trap, Christs. There is no one to blame because we are ushering in the time of Christ and showing the time of me, myself and I the door.
6. We are in this together,
Rami

1. It is I, Rami. It isn't that the sky is falling. It's that things are changing in ways that will provide ample opportunities for new growth. This is what we on our end are highly interested and invested in, growth. Why? Because growth = love. The more love that we have, the more our precious earth project can transform to reflect what we are made of.
2. Christ is good about rolling with the punches and making the best of difficult situations. This is what we can model. Don't focus on what's happening on the surface but rather, why it's happening.
3. This may be the first time many of you have been introduced to me. I know that Rick is a little bit in the dark about my identity. Like Jesus, St. Germain and Mother Mary, I Am a super soul. You can say that the super souls are siblings and were the first personified creations of I Am. We had a larger and more intense amount of I Am energy from the get-go, so we had a head start.
4. All of you are our children in one way and brothers and sisters in another. Your I Am energy, your souls, came from us in micro-droplet form and now look at what has transpired! You have grown and developed and returned to the fold, where you began. You came full circle. You are each living testament to the power of love and for that we are eternally grateful. I speak for all of the super souls when I say, "If they can return to love, so can everyone else!"
5. It is with great pleasure that I have this opportunity to speak with you. Each week, we will give you some insider information so we can all be on the same page.
6. Welcome home, Christs. Welcome home.
7. With gratitude,
Rami
