March: What Has God Done in my Life Thus Far?

1. Now to continue our series on mastery, let's look at who or what is doing the mastery. The soul is what is doing the mastery. It isn't the character at all. The soul is mastering the character. If one were to say, "I am a spiritual master" this could be very misleading. The I Am energy that is God is what the soul is comprised of and this is the true master of what is essentially experience, and there are many, many levels of experience in any world of form. Let's take a look at your own life experience so far and lay out some framework for our discussion.

- 1 – Your first Breath
- 2 – Relationship Through Dependence
- 3 – Autonomy
- 4 – Relationship Through Interdependence
- 5 – Leading by Example
- 6 – Independence
- 7 – Freedom

2. 1 – Your first Breath

God activated your mother's body during your form's gestational period and then continued to activate both forms through soul splitting or duplication, as each human form requires its own microcosm of life energy that is God.

3. 2 – Relationship Through Dependence

When you were a newborn baby through early childhood, you were dependent on other aspects of God to care for your physical and emotional needs. Your soul was not yet able to take on these tasks. It works in tandem with the body's natural operating system, the ego, during the early years. As one grows so does the other. If the ego itself fails to develop properly through neglect or abuse, the soul has less range or capacity to work with. Think of the ego as a container. If it fails to expand, then the soul would therefore have less to work with. God has to work with what it has to express love through. The energy of God spreads through relationship or fails to spread through relationship. This is where it gets tricky. Your soul worked in tandem with a community of souls you were brought up in and each of these were given green lights or red lights by all involved egos. Think of a busy city street. The streetlight systems that are there to prevent accidents can be likened to egos who are continuously saying "go" to souls or "stop" or "proceed with caution".

4. 3 – Autonomy

You started to experience small amounts of independence that increased over time. In the context of what we are talking about, your ego developed to the point where it began to give its own signals to your soul, If the soul is God, and it is, then the ego system started to allow or not allow God to express through form. Remember, this is by design, as God created form and ego as strength building tools through the act of experience. Each and every time that your soul received at least a yellow light, then it expanded. Expansion in form equals differing levels of mastery. Every new relationship offers new opportunity to say yes to the soul or give love the green light. Not only does the soul expand when this happens, but the web of souls expands as I spoke of last month.

5. 4 – Relationship Through Interdependence

Rather than a complicated city, let's look at a simple social structure such as a small town. God is dependent on other parts of God for city services, school, jobs, transportation, and the buying and selling of goods. A small town is a small part of the larger web. Every part is dependent on every other part on the outside and on the inside. Souls are given permission to have a say at times and are denied this opportunity at other times. Look at your own life's experience. Were you frequently a green, yellow, or red light to love? in the big scheme of things, those who always give love the green light might be socially scorned, as the ego is not a big fan of love.

6. 5 – Leading by Example

If you are reading this now, there's a good to excellent chance that your body doesn't have much room for anything that isn't love. In other words, your soul has literally become you. It matured to the point where the statement "I Am" is true. God received so many green lights through a wide variety of relationships and experiences, that it was able to become the driving force and the ego was delegated to being a backseat passenger in a child's safety seat. When you walk into a room, other souls know and they look to you as an example.

7. 6 – Independence

Some of you have been flying for some time now. You are not dependent on anyone saying yes, no, or maybe to you. I Am is always your driving force and it always says yes to love. It always points the way, one moment at a time.

8. 7 – Freedom

Some of what I have spoken of today could be found in any human development textbook, but the real content is the soul's perspective or God's perspective. This is a short description of how God has learned to master you.

9. Love is the miracle that you are.
