August – Solitude

1. Greetings Christ Community. I have three short letters for you this month. I want us to apply the solitude strand of wisdom to three different areas. These are the sun, the ocean, and the earth. Let's start off with the sun. How does the magnificent sun have anything whatsoever to do with solitude?
2. It sits up in the sky and provides warmth to the earth. It is connected to all that is. It is a world unto itself and yet it is in relationship to all. It doesn't need anything. It is complete and only offers service, which is providing warmth. Solar panels can save the sun's energy and convert it into useable electricity to energize a wide variety of products, from electric stoves, microwaves, refrigerators, and computers, to cellphones and curling irons.
3. What does the sun have to do with Christ? The answer is everything, my dears. You are each a mini version of a sun. You are in solitude, connected to the All of All, and you are in relationship to your human sisters and brothers, helping their own inner light to grow. So that one day, they too will walk alongside you in solitude and in togetherness (September's focus).
4. With love and kindness,
Mother Mary

August – Solitude

1. To continue, my loves, let's apply solitude to the ocean. The ocean provides life to that which lives in its waters. It provides food for those who ask for its nourishment. It provides beauty for those who want to gaze upon it, and thrilling excitement for swimmers, skiers, and boat riders alike. It does not ask to be used as a garbage dump nor as a place to conveniently place toxic waste, and yet it has to accept a lack of love and appreciation from those who don't know any better or simply don't care. It is in solitude with that which sustains it and is in relationship with all – the good, the bad, and the ugly. It doesn't ask for appreciation, but loves it when it receives some. It doesn't ask for abuse, but has to accept and allow it.

2. In solitude, you are like the sun and the ocean, giving love unconditionally without anything expected in return. Think of solitude as part of wholeness (October's focus). It is wonderful to receive love from those who clean the beaches and take plastic bottles out of the water. And it will be wonderful when each of you receives a warm smile or a nice gesture. It will warm your heart when it happens.

3. Love is all there is.

Love, Mother Mary

1. To conclude, the earth sustains all life. In solitude it is free to flourish. In relationship it can be treated well and supported, or used and abused by those who are strongly in the grip of ego and seek to control it for personal and corporate gain. It can bounce back after a destructive flood or forest fire. It doesn't have a choice. It has always been at the whim of ego-led humans since the beginning.
2. Of the three areas for our conversation this month, the sun is the only one who can't be messed with by humans. It is too far away and too powerful for anyone who may dare. The ocean and the earth are too close, and have no ability to keep certain things away from themselves. Their solitude can be disturbed, while Christ's solitude is more like the sun's. We rub shoulders with those who walk by. They are that close and yet the power of Christ is equally as powerful as the sun's. So we need not be concerned with being too close, like the ocean and the earth are.
3. The next time you think of Mother Nature, be sure to include yourself as one of its elements.
4. I will see you next month.
Love, Mother Mary
